- Secondary school banding tests are used to admitting pupils with a wide range of academic abilities.
- Under the 'fair banding' system, all pupils who'd like a place at a specific school take the same test.
- Their results are used to put them into an ability band, for example:

Band A (lowest marks): 25% of children

Band B: 25% of children

Band C: 25% of children

Band D (highest marks): 25% of children

- The school will then offer places to equal numbers of children within each band to ensure they're admitting an even spread of academic abilities.

Thank you!
